

EJ-R

line level signal
onto telephone

broadcast meetings
via telephone

passive device

The EJ-R provides a one-way ramp for putting line level audio signals on to a telephone line. Simply hook-up the EJ-R between the base of a telephone and the phone handset, then connect a line level audio signal via the 1/4" jack on the side of the EJ-R, and the audio signal will be placed on the telephone line. Then use either an EJ series product or the TTIAB to take the signal off the telephone line on the other end

Now you have an affordable solution for distance learning in multiple classrooms, or for broadcasting a meeting to multiple locations.

The EJ-R is an passive device. No power source is needed to operate the EJ-R. The EJ-R has a switch for siezing the telephone line once a connection is established, thus avoiding accidental dropping of the telephone connection. It also comes with a 3' telephone cord to assist in making the connection between the phone and handset.
